Digging Deeper Into The Thorniest Issues In Private Equity

‘Too Hot To Touch’

Interactive Discussion Sessions

Find out what your peers really think about the most controversial topics in private equity. These brand new sessions will be led by industry experts in a closed-door boardroom setup and will focus on discussing the more difficult topics often avoided at conferences.

Taking place strictly under The Chatham House Rule, delegates will be encouraged to speak openly during the discussions and take notes, but The Rule offers the protection that no comments can be attributed to the person who made them. This will allow for frank, honest and more fruitful discussion between peers. Uncut!

Topics to be discussed include:

- Fundless GPs: How Will They Change The Traditional Axis Of GP/LP?
- Is The Growing Popularity Amongst LPs For Infrastructure Investing A Challenge To The Traditional Fund Model?
- Have The BRICs Had Their Day?
- Retention Of Staff And Key Man Clause: What Options Are Open To LPs When The Team Is No Longer The One They Invested In?
- How Can LPs Discern A Stable Team?

Session leaders include:

Jonny Maxwell

Reiner Braun, Professor of Entrepreneurial Finance
FRIEDRICH-ALEXANDER-UNIVERSITY (FAU) ERLANGEN-NÜRNBERG
In contrast to most other asset classes past performance is still considered to be a good predictor of future performance in private equity. Our research challenges this conjecture: while experienced GPs were able to consistently outperform their peers before 1999, such persistence has disappeared since then. This finding that private equity has conformed to the pattern of mean reversion found in many other markets has uncomfortable implications.

Our approach is tailored to the needs of our clients, with an emphasis on understanding each General Partner's specific issues and requirements.

UBS PFG also offers secondary market advisory services solely focused on advising holders of private equity interests in funds and equity stakes in private companies on their liquidity options. The dedicated team has broad experience in all types of secondary transactions, including limited and full auctions, synthetic secondaries and joint venture structures.
