Impact Investments in Emerging Markets

Environment and society are interrelated: Human activities currently are causing environmental damage and shifts in climate patterns across the globe. Additionally, environmental degradation threatens the economic catch-up in emerging markets and widens the social gap. Solving these challenges requires investments in companies with transformative business models. Impact investments can generate a positive, quantifiable contribution towards a sustainable future without compromising on returns.

This event, organized by SECA in cooperation with Golding Capital Partners and Blue Earth Capital aims at managers and decision-makers in the investment sector of Swiss family offices, insurance firms, and pension funds.
