Report from the Chairman

Dear Members and Readers

The average private equity fund went up more than 5% in 2018, while public market indexes experienced double-digit annual declines. Private markets, actively managed by fund managers are not subject to the high volatility of the stock market and have a tendency to outperform public equities during periods when the latter decline in value. The slowing economy, trade wars and political concerns that lead to volatility in 2018 remain with us in the current year. Private equity has outperformed stocks over longer periods, attracting growing numbers of limited partners. The estimated $757 billion fresh commitment flows to private capital worldwide in 2018 – including $460 billion in classic private equity funds - stands 18% below 2017’s record fund raising of $925 billion (Preqin 2019). However, private equity is the only asset category remaining where active management produces better net-of-fees returns than passive index investing. This outstanding achievement has happened amid a general move towards concentration on very large private equity houses. For example, Apollo IX LP has raised more than $24 billion alone. Private equity appetite by investors is experiencing secular growth, but the number of funds seeking capital and fund raising activity has been rising even more rapidly. There are more than 3’700 fund managers seeking to raise close to $1 trillion capital in 2019.

Switzerland has seen its fair share of the rising tide in 2018. Private equity as well as venture capital investments have hit record numbers. With over CHF 1.2 billion invested into early stage and growth companies we look back to a very successful year for the industry. ICT and Fintech deals booked new record levels. With plenty of fresh money coming into the venture capital market we expect a very busy 2019.
Switzerland is an attractive investment destination not only for its top tier research and education infrastructure and competitive tax regime, but also for the solid currency, relatively low public sector costs and 0% net public debt position of the country. Investors can make money here, but most important they can keep it as well. In a world full of populist politics, oversized public sectors, weak currencies and unsustainable public debt these features will become increasingly relevant for the prudent investor. We should build on this competitive advantage and devise strategies to accelerate innovation and capital formation and foster the upcoming digital economy. The SECA will do its part to make this happen.

SECA - Our key action points
SECA plays an important part in the Swiss private equity and venture capital ecosystem, whether that is by facilitating new relationships between fund managers and investors at our events or by lobbying with policymakers for a competitive regulatory framework. These efforts are helping notable developments that we have witnessed in 2018. For example, our cooperation with Invest Europe on Europe’s Professional Standard Handbook and statistical database and our support for the Swiss Entrepreneurship Foundation. In this constantly evolving and complex regulatory environment, we continue to do our utmost to prepare our members for the challenges ahead. Our education programmes are well received.
Figure 3: Growth in “Quality and Quantity” SECA Membership growth over the last 10 years.

Our constant industry lobbying – supported by a positive shift in the public opinion on our industry - has improved our capacity to deliver our message to the government and business organizations. We monitor negotiations on the regulatory framework of Swiss supervisory authorities and the prudent treatment of private equity firms.

To achieve this goal we will focus on five key objectives in the coming year:

1. Representation and Lobbying: Maintain dialogue with key stakeholders to effect changes to policy, tax and regulatory environment.

2. Networking: Create an interesting set of event formats and geographical distribution throughout Switzerland. Provide opportunities to increase cooperation and deal flow between SECA members. Use digital technology to this end.

3. Research and Data Analysis: Conduct and publish research on issues important to the venture capital, M&A and private equity industry, including cooperation with institutions like Invest Europe.

4. Professional Standards and Legal Documentation: Our professional standards work improves on industry practices, including environmental, social and governance (ESG) issues.

5. Education and Training: Offer trainings to improve the professional skills and expertise of practitioners or relevant people like pension fund managers.

Industry Representation and Lobbying

In the past 12 months, our long-running endeavor to grow the depth of the capital pool for Swiss growth companies has resulted in tangible achievements. Based in Bern, the Swiss Entrepreneurs Foundation was founded early 2018 under the patronage of Swiss Federal Councillor Johann N. Schneider-Ammann.

The aim of the foundation is to support start-ups and entrepreneurship within Switzerland and to promote a Swiss innovation ecosystem with improved basic conditions for the commercialization of innovative technologies.
The foundation pursues both a public and non-profit approach. It does not seek to make a profit and does not represent commercial interests, with the foundation’s profits and capital used exclusively for the purposes mentioned above.

The Swiss Entrepreneurs Foundation (SwissEF) was financed by sponsors and private donors. The interdisciplinary Board of Trustees is supported by a high profile international Advisory Board.

A focus area of work was to improve the venture capital environment and promote new growth financing programmes. During the winter session 2018, it was possible to conduct successfully the first parliamentary event. SwissEF President Urs Berger and the SwissEF Foundation Councils Ruedi Noser and Pascale Vonmont discussed the issue with the Councils of States and National Councils. The taxation of employee shares and options as well as the quotas and administration of qualified employees from third countries were the main topics of intensive discussion.

The SECA supports for example other key initiatives like the Swiss Investment Fund (SIF) or Zukunftsfonds Schweiz in order to promote private equity growth.

SECA Communication Platform

Our communication and public affairs team under the leadership of Martin Meier-Pfister improves key stakeholders’ understanding of private equity and venture capital by promoting the industry’s benefits and addressing critical issues.

The broad scope of our PR work requires a nuanced approach, as our audiences have diverse needs and expectations. This holds true for our internal communication as well since we have a broad membership structure, covering industry segments with very different priorities. For this reason, we are maintaining specially designed PR to achieve maximum impact. In recent years, we have positioned SECA as a respected and balanced voice on the topic of private markets, including a proponent of ESG standards and responsible investing.

Our well regarded SECA eNewsletter is the flagship publication of Swiss private equity and a good showcase of our “all digital programme”. It was ranked by Google as the most important website on private equity in Switzerland. Also, the SECA Web App brings mobile to our members.

On Tuesday, 18 June 2019, we plan the 4th SECA Summer Party at Frauenbadi Zürich. This Get Together Event will be one of the social highlights in 2019.
Research and Data Analysis
The seventh edition of the SWISS VENTURE CAPITAL REPORT was published in January 2019 in cooperation with startupticker.ch. The publication has established itself as the benchmark guide for the Swiss VC industry and a valuable source for industry data and statistics.

The establishment and maintenance of the European Data Cooperative together with Invest Europe means we can now provide our members more robust and comprehensive private equity industry data to support our discussions with policymakers. In 2018 SECA has contributed money and work to this important project.

Meanwhile, the successful launch of the Swiss Entrepreneurship Foundation demonstrates how much progress we have made in recent years to reach policymakers and large corporates directly in Bern. This project illustrates the practical benefits of our European database and Swiss statistical documentations on private equity and venture capital investment since this data was instrumental to bring all stakeholders to the table.

Professional Standards and Education
Bringing the industry up to date with regulation and best practice through tailor made training programmes is central to SECA. In November 2018, SECA conducted the 7th “SECA Private Equity Workshop” in Zürich enrolling not only SECA members, but also professionals from pension funds, asset management and public institutions. In addition to the 8th SECA Private Equity Workshop in November 2019, SECA is also offering the 2nd SECA Workshop Venture Capital on 24./25.05.2019 in Zürich. Save the date!

SECA is the guardian of the Swiss private equity ecosystem’s professional standards. We support our members to work at the cutting edge of operational excellence and best practice. For example, in such fields as reporting standards and ESG.

Please find digital copy of the comprehensive “Professional Standard Handbook”, which was published 2018 by Invest Europe with our support.

We plan several events and networking lunches as well as exclusive book publications and Swiss M&A reports. Our focus is on offering useful products to your work.

Organizational Development – Our Platforms
The SECA is fully committed to represent the interest of each group of our diverse membership base. In order to achieve this goal we organise the association around various operating platforms. Each platform led by a chapter leader, who is in charge of achieving a set of objectives, which we renew on a regular basis. These Chapter leaders get support from the SECA Secretariat, which helps to develop a strategy for each industry platform. The chapter leaders form the executive committee.

Organizational Development

I would like to thank all members of the SECA board, working groups and committees, who have given their time to the association it has been a great pleasure to work with them in 2018. I would like to thank the Prof. Maurice Pedergnana, our secretary general, and his team for all their effort on behalf of the membership.

On 3rd of July 2019 we will have a top tier programme of speakers at the SECA Private Equity Conference. Book the date!

Our 34th SECA General Assembly took place on the 15th of May 2018 at the FIFA World Football Museum, Zürich.

How will the private equity market evolve in 2019?

Transaction multiples on EV/EBITDA in the Swiss private market continue climbing as a rising sum of capital flows in and deal making remains robust. Such an influx of capital has led to record volumes in Swiss venture capital and to buyout multiples rising in tandem with public market multiples since the financial crisis. Deal sizes are also rising, and larger buyouts tend to transact at higher multiples.
The Swiss yield curve remains hostage of European interest rate policy and firmly in negative territory, however, parts of the US yield curve are currently inverted for the first time since 2007. The inverted yield curve often speaks to a coming recession and may precipitate a market risk-off reaction as investors in public equities and bonds rush for the exit to lock in gains after a decade-long bull market.

In combination with political risks (Brexit, Italy, US-China trade war etc.) this could lead to increased volatility going forward. There is reason to be careful in pricing new deals and to be prudent with regard to debt multiples on those transactions. By historical comparisons, profit margins are high and could contract quickly in a downturn.

In general, we can be positive for long term returns. We are thankful to Switzerland that we can operate our companies in a country with no net public debt and a 33% public sector share of Gross National Product (GNP). Since we know that current public debt and public sector costs equate to future taxes, smart global investors will be investing here instead of other places, where future investment returns will be taxed away to serve gigantic debt levels, fund inefficient or oversized public sectors or face outright defaults on their public debt burden.

The Swiss private equity industry will continue to increase long term value through focusing on innovation efforts, improving the management of innovation and systems, by supporting young firms, and by fostering a positive environment for technological change in the wider economy. Therefore, it will be a good place to be invested. The private equity industry has proven over the last three decades to have a superior governance model for creating shareholder value. The SECA will labour hard in the coming year to make sure our industry can operate in an efficient manner with the right level of regulation and policy support. Thank you for being on board in this important endeavour.

Welcome note by the members of SECA’s Venture Capital Chapter

Switzerland’s venture capital ecosystem is flourishing; in total, more than CHF 1.24 billion flowed into Swiss start-ups in 2018, an increase of 31.8% compared to the previous year’s volume of CHF 938 million. This represents a new record for start-up investments in the Swiss Confederation. These numbers stem from the Swiss Venture Capital Report 2019, published annually by startupticker.ch and SECA. The number of financing rounds also developed positively, rising from 175 (in 2017) to 230 (in 2018).

Overall, these figures suggest that the chances of obtaining start-up and/or growth financing for company founders domiciled in Switzerland increased significantly again last year.

Let’s take another look at the numbers. Both the steep increase in financial resources invested in information and communication technology (ICT) companies and the significant decline in capital provided to biotech companies are remarkable. Between 2013 and 2017, biotech investments clearly outperformed (in terms of “capital invested”) all other major industrial sectors in Switzerland, i.e. ICT, medical technologies, cleantech, healthcare and others. In 2018, this trend was broken, and the ICT sector was apparently the most popular among investors.

Looking ahead

Do we have reason to believe that this growth trend of the Swiss start-up investment ecosystem is not sustainable? Considering the global political situation, there is no reason for us to lull ourselves into security. But there are numerous positive signals that suggest that the Swiss venture capital scene may continue to prosper: Swiss venture capital companies have optimistic expectations regarding their fundraising targets for 2019. Furthermore, the number of seed rounds, i.e. very early-stage start-up financing rounds, rose by 81% between 2017 and 2018. This indicates that there will be a steady inflow of new follow-on investment opportunities in the coming years, and we can also conclude that the seed-stage landscape, notably the business angel community, has developed remarkably well in the past years.

And there is more. The Swiss venture capital and business angel community is impressed by two large-scale projects that have launched or are about to be launched soon:

- On the one hand, there are two relatively large fund projects initiated by Swisscom and by ZKB & Swisscanto Invest. These projects have successfully collected CHF 150m (ZKB & Swisscanto) and CHF 200m (Swisscom). Both funds strive to invest in start-ups in the so-called growth phase. The exciting aspect in this context is that some Swiss pension funds are among the most important investors in these two fund vehicles. While in other regions, such as in the U.S. for example, pension fund participations in venture capital funds are quite common, commitments by Swiss pension funds in Swiss or European venture capital funds are still the exception.
On the other hand, there are two fund-raising projects that are even bigger in terms of their total capital volume, the Swiss Entrepreneurs Fund and the Swiss Future Fund. Both initiatives have been under preparation for several years. Both are planning to collect comparatively large amounts of capital and – following different strategic approaches – plan to invest the monies in venture capital funds and directly in individual companies, too.

The completion of these major projects should help to improve the currently somewhat bleak prospects for Swiss growth financings for Swiss start-ups. And it is fair to assume that the availability of more capital for follow-on financings will also have a positive effect on early-stage investors, who are up until now used to investing a lot of energy to get follow-on funding for the start-ups they back – even for the most promising ones.

ICOs

The development of initial coin offerings (ICOs) of start-ups in Switzerland was less spectacular in 2018 if we take 2017 as a benchmark. While a total of USD 728.2 million was raised in 2017 as part of ICOs, this figure shrank to CHF 233.5 million in 2018. Nevertheless, the venture capital scene is convinced that ICOs and the full digitization of transaction processes will eventually prevail. Global ICO numbers suggest exactly this. The rational is simple: Hardly any investor is fond of the tedious and cumbersome transaction processes which entail numerous offline and online interactions between with different parties. Today we are used to the opaque online or offline origination of new opportunities to investors (i.e. somebody introduces a team to an investor or vice versa), online and offline negotiations between the parties (i.e. due diligence and structuring of investments), offline signing processes at the notary, online documentations of the transaction-related contracts, and online/offline orchestrations of monies and other legal documents. The overwhelming majority of investors is eager to process transactions completely online.

The founders

Last but certainly not least: All the developments described above, i.e. the increased investment volumes, the large fund projects, and the increasing digitization of transaction processing, would not have been possible (or necessary) if the quality and professionalism of the technological innovations and the founding teams developing and marketing them had not risen dramatically during the past years. Thanks to the founders, more and more Swiss start-ups are developing extremely well, showing impressive growth rates and exits, and drawing more and more attention of investors to the Swiss start-up scene.

The start-up scene itself is stimulated by the outstanding quality of Swiss universities and by Switzerland’s overall attractiveness for companies, entrepreneurs and investors, which stems from the stable regulatory environment, the incomparably high quality of life, and the cultural openness and diversity of the Swiss. We are happy and proud to be part of this ecosystem! The SECA Venture Capital Chapter is looking forward to the coming year and to many exciting new investments.

Buy & Build: a megatrend in Private Equity explained by the example of the Mold and Robotics Group

It is an ambitious vision: to build the first globally present market leader in injection molding tools and automation systems focusing on thin-walled plastic packaging containers and in-mold labelling. To get there, CGS – as the majority shareholder of H. Müller, Fabrique de Moules – is partnering with Udo Gröber, former sole owner. Close to two years into the partnership, they have taken major steps towards this vision: Driven by CGS’ Mold & Robotics Group now encompasses three companies and is solidly anchored in Europe and North America.

The high levels of dry powder, the limited number of possible deals and the high levels of cash available to strategic buyers have naturally led to significant competition among private equity funds. This fierce competition moved EV/EBITDA multiples close to historical highs and associated therewith leverage levels. Private Equity has its roots in highly leveraged deals of the early 1980s. It is now experiencing a significant shift from deleveraging to operational improvement. A study by The Boston Consulting Group showed that while deleveraging was the main value creation contributor in the 1980s, operational improvement had clearly taken over by 2012. In a recent Roland Berger study, 31% of the respondents saw add-on acquisitions as the most important value creation measure of private equity today, i.e. one of the cornerstones of a Buy & Build strategy. This article starts with a theoretical introduction to Buy & Build and then illustrates the Buy & Build strategy by the example of CGS’ portfolio company Mold and Robotics Group.

Value creation through add-on acquisitions (Buy & Build)

A Buy & Build process is initiated with a platform investment. The platform company represents the nucleus of the group to be built. It is typically well-positioned in its niche market, but – for example – lacks the knowledge, personnel or financial capacity to internationalize its business or to expand its product portfolio to become a systems supplier. The private equity company then builds add-on acquisitions around this platform to form a well-positioned and competitive group.

Strategically, Buy & Build can go in two directions: vertical or horizontal integration. Vertical integration with add-on acquisitions allows a company to expand its coverage of the value chain so as to better serve customers with a holistic product offer. In contrast, horizontal integration affords companies the opportunity to deepen its market penetration with additional products, applications and services, to enter new regions or to increase market share by consolidating competitors into one group. Furthermore, traditional synergies such as scale effects in procurement and in SG&A expenses can arise and be exploited, alongside greater sales force effectiveness and improved pricing.

To gain a better understanding of the increasing importance of Buy & Build deals as a means of operational improvement, The Boston Consulting Group (BCG) (2016) joined forces with HHL Leipzig Graduate School of Management to analyze 2,372 private equity deals exited from 1998 to 2012. The results revealed that the share of private equity deals including add-on acquisitions climbed from 20% of all deals in 2000 to 53% in 2012. The average number of add-on acquisitions per deal grew from 1.3 in 2000 to 2.7 in 2012.
BCG found that Buy & Build deals significantly outperformed stand-alone deals, especially for transactions involving comparatively small platforms (enterprise value of less than USD 70 million). Buy & Build investments based on such platforms generated an average gross IRR of 52.4% compared to 20.3% for stand-alone deals. Smaller Buy & Build cases also outperformed medium-sized cases with an average IRR of 36.9% (platform EVs between USD 70 million and 290 million) and large cases with an average IRR of 12.5% (platform EV > USD 290 million).

The following two explanations could be the main factors accounting for this. First, multiples for smaller enterprises are expanding faster than for larger counterparts. Second, smaller companies are typically found in strongly fragmented markets, allowing for faster value creation via consolidation than with the involvement of larger companies.

Alongside this size factor, BCG found the following drivers to be significant in determining the success of Buy & Build cases:

- Private equity sponsor with operational and Buy & Build experience (especially in Buy & Build cases involving smaller companies whose management often has less experience in strategic projects such as acquisitions or internationalization)
- Operationally efficient and scalable platform
- Platform operating in a low growth, low profitability and highly fragmented industry
- Only one or two add-ons
- Add-ons operating in platform’s core industry
- Add-on acquisitions promoting internationalization

Introduction to the Mold and Robotics Group

Packages manufactured by Mold & Robotics Group machines are part of consumers’ daily lives worldwide. They package a vast array of goods including yogurt, butter, cheese spread, ice cream, baby food, and hygiene products. Companies with well-known brands of consumer goods rely on the group’s packaging systems, its expertise, and its next-door approach to customer service.

Source: H. Müller, Fabrique de Moules
Attractive market with promising prospects
The in-mold labeling method inserts labels during injection molding, making the packaging process more efficient and cutting its total cost. The market for thin-walled packaging is constantly growing by an average of 5-6% annually. The US represents a particularly high-potential market and promises the highest growth rates because market penetration is expanding quickly.

System expertise is a decisive competitive advantage in this market that is still far from consolidation. As a single-source supplier of molds as well as automation, Mold & Robotics Group helps customers integrate its products into their production methods and cut their total operational costs sustainably.

The heart of Mold & Robotics Group
H. Müller, Fabrique de Moules (Müller) forms the core of Mold & Robotics Group. It is specialized in top-quality complete systems and known as a pioneer for in-mold labeling applications. Its services range from packaging development and optimization to construction of top-performance production lines and customer support throughout the equipment’s entire service life. Müller’s outstanding track record has made the company a global leader in this specialized sector.

Targeted Buy & Build strategy
Within one year after the acquisition of Müller, the group could boast three specialized companies with fully complementary operations. After sifting through the North American market with a fine-toothed comb, the selected candidates CBW Automation and Dollins Tool joined Mold & Robotics Group. CBW is specialized in robots and automatization solutions while Dollins manufactures molds for thin-walled plastic containers.

Mold & Robotics Group’s presence in Europe and North America brings it closer to its customers, improves and accelerates development processes, and boosts reactiveness when urgent support is required.

Close to two years into the partnership, significant milestones have been achieved in the integration of the group companies:

- Implementation of a group matrix organisation with three business units, three sites and corresponding leadership teams
- Secondment of employees to push forward integration locally
- Regular exchange of employees to align cultures
- New customer projects won based on local presence and combined technologies of the group companies
- Economies of scale realized in SG&A, e.g. centralization of IT, combination of purchasing and logistics

Next to managing the ongoing integration, CGS together with the management of the Mold and Robotics Group is now having discussions with potential Asian add-on candidates to penetrate the local market. Furthermore, the former sole owner of Müller has handed over the CEO role of the Mold and Robotics Group to a longstanding employee of the group. He will stay, however, as a mentor to the group management as well as a shareholder and board member.
Udo Gröber, former sole owner of H. Müller, Fabrique de Moules:
“Partnering with CGS is fortuitous for Müller as well as for me personally. By combining our technical expertise with the financial strength of CGS and its know-how in building internationally leading corporate groups, we can open up opportunities for development that we never would have had alone. Mold & Robotics Group and with it Müller have a highly promising future.”

Overview Switzerland

After a good IPO-vintage 2017 with major large IPOs such as Galenica and Landis+Gyr with a combined transaction volume far north of CHF 4bn, 2018 did not disappoint: 12 companies listed their shares on SIX Swiss Exchange, seven of them included a placement of shares. SIX has not seen more activity since 2001, when there were 15 listings.

The Swiss stock market performed excellent in 2017 with volatility at record low levels, which laid a solid ground for 2018. However, the first correction in 2018 came already by the end of January when the Swiss Performance Index SPI lost almost 9% within two weeks. Markets calmed down shortly thereafter, which allowed the IPO-market to open by the end of March, when there were two IPOs with placement of new shares and one listing within a single week. Stäfa based Sensirion, one of the leading manufacturers of digital microsensors and -systems placed shares worth more than CHF 300m. On the following day, Medartis went public raising almost CHF 150m. Medartis was founded by Dr. Thomas Straumann and produces high-precision implants for the surgical fixation of bone fractures. These two IPOs were also the best performing IPOs in 2018. Before these two successful IPOs, ASMALLWORLD went public via a direct listing process.

Logistics-company CEVA followed at the beginning of May with a transaction volume of over CHF 800m. Shares were issued at the low end of a wide price range and the share price fell by more than 30% until takeover-rumors and subsequently a takeover-offer in October. Only two weeks after CEVA, the biotech-company Polyphor was able to raise CHF 155m fresh capital. Machnie-manufacturer Klingelnberg also joined SIX towards the end of June with a transaction volume of CHF 240m. Lalique, a niche player within the luxury goods segment, switched from BX Swiss to SIX, completing a very active first semester.

In the second half of the year, SIG Combibloc "returned" to SIX with its CHF 1.7bn-IPO being the largest IPO of the year in Switzerland and one of the top-10 IPOs worldwide. SIG was taken over in 2007. After Lalique, real estate company Fundamenta also decided to switch from BX Swiss to SIX in December, accompanied by a capital increase of CHF 89m. The other three new companies Blackstone Resources, ObsEva (dual-listing) and IGEA Pharma all chose the way of a direct listing.

The total transaction volume 2018 was lower than 2017 in Switzerland which was also the case in Europe. One of the reasons was rather low IPO-activity in the third quarter. Fears of a globally weakening economy sent stock markets downwards leading to the worst December performances since the financial crisis.

On the international stage, the highlight was without any doubt Softbank Corp.'s (telecom subsidiary of Softbank Group) massive placement of USD 24bn in Japan: the second largest IPO ever after Alibaba in 2014.

Disappointing direct listings

When going public or deciding to list shares on an exchange, the process is usually accompanied by banks, lawyers and other experts. The usual process includes – among many other things – independent bank analysts publishing in depth research reports and educating investors. Depending on investor feedbacks, the coordinating banks are able to set a price range and offer the shares in a bookbuilding process. This procedure... allows for shares being placed according to demand at a fair market price, publicity and frequent trading in the shares following the IPO.

In a direct listing process, the issuer has to communicate an indicative reference price which – compared to the regular IPO process – has not been determined in a bookbuilding process by the market. There is no guarantee for trading on the first trading day and because of the lack of marketing efforts by a banking syndicate, the first public appearance of the company is likely to get lost in today’s immense flow of information.

The challenges of the direct listing process can be seen in the performance. Compared to the reference price, companies choosing a direct listing in 2018 have all lost more than 40% until the end of the year.

This direct listing process is currently under review by a working group led by SIX Exchange Regulation AG.

Outlook

The market environment for IPOs remains challenging with ongoing uncertainties such as the tradewar between China and the U.S. and Brexit. Investors therefore currently prefer highly liquid stocks which limits options for smaller IPOs. We hear that some smaller transactions have been postponed at the beginning of 2019. However, the recently strong market performance certainly helped to regain investors’ confidence. In Switzerland, the medtech-company Medacta successfully launched the IPO-season at the beginning of April with a transaction volume over CHF 600 million and a market capitalisation of around CHF 2 billion. Shortly after, Swiss trainmaker Stadler Rail followed. At the time of writing, the IPO was not priced but the transaction volume was expected to exceed CHF 1.5 billion. We expect more IPOs to follow this year.

Internationally, investors look into the U.S. with great interest, where Lyft raised more than USD 2.3 billion in its IPO. Other "Unicorns" such as Uber, Airbnb, Pinterest and many more are said to plan an IPO or have already filed to go public. 2019 promises to continue to be an exciting year for IPOs.

Swiss Corporate Law Reform

As reported in the 2018 SECA Yearbook, the Swiss Parliament had commenced its deliberation of the Swiss Corporate Law Reform in 2018. After the National Council made decent progress in its deliberation of the reform earlier in 2018, the State Council has resubmitted the reform in December 2018 to its legal commission (RK-S) with the instruction to RK-S to reconsider and reinstate the reform in a manner generally more digestible for the Swiss economy and closer and more compatible to the draft reform in the form proposed by the National Council earlier in 2018.

As a next step, the RK-S will have to revisit and reconsider the tightening it had proposed to the State Council, in particular in respect of the Ordinance against Excessive Compensation in Public Companies, with a view to soften or abandon its earlier tightening compared to the reform as proposed earlier by the National Council. Based on such revised proposals of its RK-S, the State Council will then have to resume its deliberation and remaining differences to the National Council will then be reconciled. The reform is hence not expected to be enacted before late 2020.

While the overall Swiss Corporate Law Reform understandably meets close attention of all relevant political and economic stakeholders, startup and VC/PE specific interests in the reform appear still underrepresented. Despite the current rather late stage of the reform process, SECA will continue its information and lobbying efforts to ensure that startup and VC/PE specific interests will continue to flow into the deliberation process. SECA will continue to inform about significant developments of particular relevance for VC/PE investments in Swiss companies.

Financial Services Act / Financial Institutions Act

On 15 June 2018, the Swiss Parliament enacted the Financial Services Act (FinSA) and the Financial Institutions Act (FinIA). The legislative project primarily aims at creating a regulatory level playing field for financial service providers, at strengthening investor protection and at harmonizing the Swiss regulatory framework with international, particularly EU standards (MiFID II/Prospectus Directive/PRIIP).

With respect to the private equity industry, we would highlight the new regime governing asset managers of small private equity funds. Subthreshold funds – below CHF 500 Mio. in the private equity space – will be regulated in the future, albeit only as “simple” asset managers. Further, the new regime will apply also to the many Swiss investment service providers which to date technically act only as “advisors” to a pro forma foreign asset management company, but in reality are in charge of the fund’s portfolio management. FinIA and FinSA as well as their implementing ordinances which are not final yet will also change the rules governing the marketing of foreign private equity funds in Switzerland.

The new laws will enter into force on 1 January 2020. Various transition periods will cushion the “regulatory blow”.

Proposed Implementation of "Global Forum" recommendations

On 17 January 2018, the Swiss Federal Council opened the consultation process for a proposed law to implement the recommendations of the Global Forum on Transparency and Exchange of Information for Tax Purposes. The draft new law aims at further tightening the transparency rules following the introduction of notification duties for holders of bearer shares and holders of participations of 25% or more in 2015 in the course of the implementation of the FATF recommendations (Financial Action Task Force):

- Although the anonymity of the holders of bearer shares has already been lifted since 1 July 2015 and holders of bearer shares must identify themselves to the company, bearer shares are now proposed to be abolished entirely.
- Violations of the notification duties are proposed to be punishable by fines.
- Companies would be required to hold a bank account with a Swiss bank.

Although the consultation process revealed mostly critical reactions, the Federal Council maintains its support for the new legislation with respect to two cornerstones of the proposed law, namely the abolishing of bearer shares and the introduction of sanctions for breaches of notification duties. The Federal Council has published the new bill on 22 November 2018 and its deliberation in the Swiss Parliament is expected to commence this spring. SECA will monitor the progress of the legislative project and inform about significant developments with particular relevance for VC/PE investments in Swiss companies.

Swiss Corporate Tax and Old Age Insurance Reform

Due to the successful call of a referendum, the Swiss Corporate Tax and Old Age Insurance Reform bill will be put to a public vote on 19 May 2019. If the vote is successful, the reform will enter into force on 1 January 2020.

One of the main reasons to implement the Swiss Corporate Tax and Old Insurance Reform bill is the abolition of the preferential tax regimes of the mixed company status and the holding regime. In order to maintain competitive without these regimes, many cantons have announced to reduce the tax burden for all corporate tax payers. For companies that were benefiting from a preferential regime, a grandfathering in the form a so called “step up” to fair market value will be available which requires careful planning and should be pre-cleared with the tax authorities.

There is currently no clarity about the consequences of a rejection of the tax reform. The federal council might put forward yet another reform. Also the question whether Switzerland could be put on the EU black list in case of a rejection remains unclear.
DAC6

In July 2020, legislation and regulation implementing the directive on administrative cooperation (DAC6) in EU member states will become effective. The amended DAC6 requires reporting to local tax authorities of any structuring that may result in a tax benefit for the taxpayer.

DAC6 will affect Swiss resident groups with EU subsidiaries or foreign resident groups with Swiss subsidiaries and transactions with EU subsidiaries. It imposes mandatory disclosure requirements for arrangements with an EU cross-border element where the arrangements fall within certain “hallmarks” mentioned in the directive and in certain instances where the main or expected benefit of the arrangement is a tax advantage. There will be a mandatory automatic exchange of information on such reportable cross-border schemes via the Common Communication Network (CCN) which will be set up by the EU. Penalties will be imposed on intermediaries (or taxpayers) that do not comply with the transparency measures.

The EU Anti-Tax Avoidance Directices (ATAD)

The EU Anti Tax Avoidance Directives (ATAD) laying down rules against tax avoidance practices. ATAD I came into effect as from 1 January 2019 while ATAD II will come into effect as from 1 January 2020. ATAD I and in particular ATAD II are likely to have considerable impacts on fund and deal structures commonly used in the private equity industry:

- Under Anti-hybrid rules (ATAD II), internal financing used for leverage acquisition structures might become tax inefficient and fund vehicles could under certain circumstances even become taxable in 2022. This could affects hybrid instruments, but particularly fund structures where a fund vehicle is used that is treated differently from a tax perspective by the fund domicile country, the investor country and investee country. It is new to the industry that the tax attributes of the investor need to be analysed in order to understand impacts in countries of the fund domicile or where a deal is structured. For this reason, it will become key to structure new funds upfront with these new rules in mind and review existing funds and investments in order to understand impacts.

- Under Interest Deductibility Limitation Rules, deductions for exceeding net interest and equivalent borrowing costs are limited to 30% of the EU borrower’s earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization (EBITDA). While these rules impact mostly debt/credit, real estate funds and the portfolio companies, private equity managers may want to ensure they are not impacted.

- Under Controlled Foreign Company Rules, the non-distributed profits of low taxed CFC subsidiaries may become taxable at the level of the EU parent entity. A CFC is an entity or a permanent establishment in which the EU parent/head office directly or indirectly holds at least 50% of the voting rights, capital, or profit rights, and the corporate tax paid on its profits is less than 50% of the corporate tax that would be paid in the parent’s member state.
The Multilateral Convention to Implement Tax Treaty Related Measures to Prevent BEPS (MLI) contains a range of anti-abuse measures, including measures aiming at putting an end to treaty abuse. Countries having signed and ratified the MLI will need to apply a clause in connection with their tax treaties that will prevent inappropriate use of tax treaties. For this purpose treaty countries have the option between a so called Principle Purpose Test (“PPT”) or a Limitation of Benefits Test. Most European countries have opted to implement the PPT into their treaties.

The PPT may entail the denial of tax treaty benefits in several situations, including capital gains realized upon exit from an investment, thereby directly impacting the return for the investors and managers. As a result of the PPT being introduced into new tax treaties, funds investing in private equity may face challenges at several levels when applying for treaty benefits: a beneficial ownership test, a substance test and an intentional/business purpose test under the PPT. Hence, the application of PPT is far broader than the substance requirements of the legacy tax treaties and might trigger significant operational changes for private equity platforms.

The PPT is not yet applicable in most countries and there is no clarity yet on how the different countries will apply these rules in practice. This is likely to become more clear in the next 1-2 years, but careful planning should be started timely since regulatory and operational adjustments will take time.

SECA Model Documentation

Last but not least, through the standing working groups of legal experts the Legal & Tax Chapter has successfully launched:

- in June 2018, a new VC Model Documentation "light" for smaller (pre-institutional investor) financing rounds that is fully compatible with the regular VC Model Documentation; and
- in September 2018, the 3rd edition of the regular SECA VC Model Documentation for financing rounds with institutional investors to reflect relevant regulatory changes as well as market input.

Recognizing the market success of the VC Model Documentations and the fact that these have become the market standard for VC/PE investments in Switzerland, the two sets of the VC Model Documentations will now be continuously revised and updated by the two standing working groups entrusted with the VC Model Documentations to reflect relevant legal and regulatory changes and market developments. The Legal & Tax Chapter hence envisages that there will be regular annual updates of the two sets of the VC Model Documentations, for the first time presumably by the end of Q2 2019.
This is a glimpse of relevant recent or imminent legal, regulatory and tax changes and past and ongoing initiatives of the Legal & Tax Chapter. We continue to strive to improve the regulatory and fiscal environment for the private market industry. This is an uphill battle in a number of respects in view of the current trends of ever more stringent regulation and fiscal tightening. Bear with us and please let us have your comments and suggestions.

VC funds – A new vintage year

Success stories such as exits and IPOs act as catalysts. Europe is becoming more attractive as a venture capital location and is catching up with the US. And in Switzerland, numerous new funds have experienced managers from the start.

Fundraising volumes in venture capital reached record highs in Europe in 2018. This environment was fuelled by large and numerous IPOs, acquisitions, financing activities and the growing number of ‘unicorns’ (startups with 1 billion or more in enterprise value). In April, the Swedish start-up Spotify with EUR 7.5 billion provided the world’s largest IPO of the last decade. Market capitalisation at the end of the first trading day was USD 26.5 billion. Commerce solutions company iZettle, also from Sweden, was sold to PayPal in September for USD 2.2 billion. Both companies are only 10 years old. In Switzerland, the numerous acquisitions and financing activities were smaller, but venture capital funds were able to benefit. There were also successes abroad: Redalpine is an investor in the mobile bank N26, which was valued at USD 2.7 billion in the last round of financing.

Success stories act as catalyst

Such successes are critical in building new funds, as fundraising is about convincing investors of the fund management team’s ability to track down future winners or even unicorns. Revenue from the sale of companies or IPOs are also preferably reinvested in new companies and new funds. Successful entrepreneurs start their next start-up or increasingly act as a business angel or venture capitalist. Overall, these success stories act as catalysts that fuel plans, be it the start of a business or a new fund. The emergence of new entrepreneurial and fund generation needs time and construction work, but more results are appearing – and not only isolated examples, but increasingly widespread.

Teams with expertise

One of the defining feature of these new funds, alongside a dedicated sector or theme focus, is that they have teams with strong industrial, scientific and financial expertise. In addition to the performance of the predecessor fund, the predominant quality criterion of investors in making a decision in which funds to invest is the performance record of the team, which is considered part of the composition of the track record of the individual fund manager.

Wingman Ventures, a new team around GetYour-Guide co-founder Pascal Mathis, is planning a seed fund exclusively for Swiss tech start-ups. At the same time, well-known names are expanding their offers. After 10 years of corporate venture, Swisscom Ventures launched a fund vehicle in 2018, in which institutional investors can participate through investment of three quarters of the capital, with Swisscom Ventures contributing a quarter. Avaloq, the company known for its banking software, also became a venture capitalist with Avaloq Ventures.

In general, topics such as the digital transformation in industrial production (Industry 4.0), cybersecurity, blockchain technology, virtual reality and artificial intelligence are in focus alongside the more established sectors, such as biotech and medtech. For example, MTIP in Basel focuses not only on the classic areas of application in medtech, but in particular on innovative aspects of the digital healthcare system including the collection, efficient evaluation and availability of information, and the safety of patient data.
Incentive for early stage investors

With the supply of new fund vehicles investing in both earlier and later stages, follow-on financing in Switzerland is becoming more likely to validate the product in the market and during the expansion phase. This is an important signal for investors in earlier rounds, which are more likely to take the investment risk if there is a prospect of finding a strong late-stage financial partner.

In terms of prospects, venture capitalists agree that some of the options are significantly more attractive in Europe, including Switzerland, than in the US, due to the lower competition and the generally smaller ‘pockets’ of local investors. The quality of the start-ups is good, if not better, as evidenced by the fact that in Europe invested capital, in particular at the later stages, comes from a large proportion of US and Asian investors. This is good news for investors, which can increasingly choose from a wider range of investment opportunities.

Private Equity: what is it and how does it work?

Private equity (PE) is an asset class that generally comprises equity investments in companies not listed on a stock exchange. The primary goal is to improve the companies’ operational and financial metrics and to realize a profit when selling them on or carrying out an Initial Public Offering (IPO). PE investments have become an integral part of the global M&A scene and are expected to contribute further to shaping the corporate landscape.

A PE investment will typically be made by a PE firm, venture capital firm or business angel, whereby they raise money from investors and provide it as capital to a target business. This capital is used to foster expansion, develop products and solutions or restructure the target’s operations, management or ownership. The aim is to increase the investment’s value.

Implementing clear investment strategies

A PE firm and its funds typically have a clear investment strategy based on which holdings are taken in various types of assets or companies, including:

- venture capital (seed and start-up funding)
- distressed funds
- mezzanine funds
- (leveraged) buyouts (LBO).

LBOs are the most relevant strategy from an M&A perspective. The principle is to acquire a controlling stake in an established company through a combination of equity and debt. The cash flows generated by the target business are used to secure and repay the financial liabilities incurred. This provides lower financing costs, enabling the target to accrue equity and increase its return on equity.

In 2017, total fundraising of private equity firms reached USD 104 billion, Europe’s highest level since 2008 and a 14% increase over 2016.

Origination of PE funds

PE firms are also known as General Partners. They typically raise money from institutional investors such as pension funds, insurance companies and family offices. These parties are known as Limited Partners. The money raised is transferred into an investment vehicle (a PE fund) that is structured as a Limited Partnership. Managed and monitored by the General Partner, the PE fund allocates the capital by investing in target companies. To align the interests of the General Partner and the various Limited Partners, the General Partner often invests its own money in the fund.

The life-span of the investment is typically four to seven+ years, following which the investee business is either sold or subject to an IPO. When this happens, the PE fund returns the invested capital to the Limited Partners, plus the additional returns the investment made. The PE firm’s own profit is generated mainly when the investee company is successfully divested to new owners, but only after the fund’s returns exceed a certain 'hurdle rate', which is the return the investment must surpass before the PE fund can collect its incentive fees. In order to run its operations, in addition to the carried interest the General Partner in its role as fund manager will be compensated with fees by the Limited Partners for the establishment, management, monitoring and dissolution of the funds – these fees are known as management fees.

Delivering benefits to investors and target businesses

For the PE business model to work, the PE firm must continuously attract investors and raise funds. This is typically by demonstrating a strong track record of delivering returns which outperform public markets. Swiss industry insiders expect PE to continue to outperform public equity – primarily due to a combination of capital structure, illiquidity and operational effectiveness – although there are increases in both competition among PE houses and levels of corporate valuations.

Not only can PE be an attractive asset class for investors, however, it also offers significant benefits to target companies. PE investors can dedicate substantial amounts of money for long holding periods, improving portfolio companies’ financial and operational metrics. They add valuable financial and managerial expertise, particularly to small and medium-sized businesses, or by combining firms to grow scale through a buy-and-build strategy. The target business can then be healthier when it is divested to a new owner or listed publicly. Against this background, PE offers alternative access to liquidity without raising high interest bank loans or aiming too early for a stock exchange listing. PE-owned companies have an opportunity to follow their strategic road map away from the glare of public markets and the armadas of equity analysts. They do not have to cope with the pressure of quarterly earnings reporting that reduces the available management time to deliver financial results.
The changing legal and regulatory framework for Private Equity in Switzerland

2020 will bring significant changes to the Swiss legal and regulatory regime affecting Private Equity (PE) funds. On 1 January 2020 the Financial Services Act (FinSA), the Financial Institutions Act (FinIA) and their implementing ordinances – as well as the revised Swiss Federal Collective Investment Schemes Act (CISA) – are expected to come into force. These new laws will have significant implications for PE funds.

Current framework applicable to PE

In general, the Swiss Federal Collective Investment Schemes Act (CISA) applies to PE funds, their activities and management and their distribution. Most PE funds are also subject to the Federal Act on Combating Money Laundering. On the transactional level, private transactions are mainly governed by the Swiss Code of Obligations. Industry-specific laws and regulations may be relevant to the target but are generally of limited relevance to PE transactions. For transactions exceeding certain thresholds, the Federal Cartel Act along with other restraints of competition need to be considered. In the case of a public tender offer, the Federal Act on Financial Market Infrastructures and, under certain circumstances, the Listing Rules of the SIX Swiss Exchange apply. Cross-border activities of any kind may also be subject to further laws and regulations such as MiFID, AIFMD or the corresponding foreign country’s laws and regulations.

FinSA, FinIA and revised CISA: what is changing? Scope of legislation

FinSA and FinIA aim to increase customer protection and will lead to an extensive reorganization of Swiss financial market law.

FinSA sets out comprehensive cross-sector rules for offering financial services and distributing financial instruments. In terms of content, the rules are based on the EU directives (MiFID II, Prospectus Directive, PRIIPs), with adjustments made to reflect circumstances specific to Switzerland.

FinIA sets the authorization conditions and organizational requirements for financial institutions subject to prudential (official) supervision. It will govern the regulatory framework applicable to all financial market participants who invest and manage third-party assets. It provides for five types of financial institutions – portfolio managers, trustees, managers of collective assets, fund management companies and securities firms – to which all PE funds can be assigned based on their activities.

As a result, PE funds will generally fall within the scope of FinSA and FinIA. The level of supervision and regulatory requirements depend on the category. While FinSA and FinIA will increase the supervision of PE funds, it allows engagement with other financial institutions on a level playing field.

The introduction of FinSA and FinIA will also lead to amendments to the CISA. These amendments relate not only to the new regulatory framework that allows for FinIA, rather than the CISA, to regulate institutions such as managers of collective assets and fund management companies.

Moreover, it amends the regime for offering foreign collective investments schemes: the ‘distribution’ concept under the CISA will be replaced by the concept of ‘offering’ adopted by FinSA, with associated changes to the available exemptions. The current licensing requirement for entities distributing collective investment schemes (distributors) will be eliminated in favor of registration and other regulatory requirements applicable to the individual client advisor. FinSA will require most distributors to have an entry in the register for investment advisors. However, persons offering collective investment schemes without any advisory services will not be obliged to do so. While the client advisor registration requirement will affect employees of PE funds, exemptions may be granted to client advisors if they work for a foreign PE fund that is already subject to a prudential supervision.

Further, neither a Swiss representative nor a paying agent will be required for the cross-border offering of collective investment schemes into Switzerland to qualified investors. PE funds to which the revised CISA is applicable will still be required to obtain approval from the Swiss Financial Market Supervisory Authority (FINMA) and to have a Swiss representative or paying agent prior to offering products to non-qualified investors in Switzerland.

Authorizations

The FinIA revises the regulatory architecture governing financial institutions and introduces a regulatory cascade with a light regulatory framework for portfolio managers and trustees, and an increasingly stringent regime. Following this approach, a more stringent license automatically includes the license to carry out the business activities of a less stringently licensed entity.

Collective asset managers that are already subject to equivalent supervision in Switzerland in line with FinIA requirements do not need to reapply for authorization. Further, PE funds have the option of being classified as a collective instead of common asset managers if this is required by law in the country where they accumulate or offer collective investment schemes or manage the occupational pension scheme.

Client segmentation

FinSA introduces a client segmentation which approximates to the MiFID II system. Separate segments exist for professional clients (with a sub-segment for institutional clients) and for retail clients. A different level of protection is applied depending on the relevant client segment, e.g., the rules of conduct according to FinSA (see later in this article) do not apply to institutional clients. Because offering financial products to either client segment entails different levels of regulation of the financial service provider, it is expected that such change will also affect the financing of PE.

Cross-border representation

FinIA permits foreign PE funds to deploy representatives in the Swiss market. Their representatives may manage (collective) assets, trade securities, maintain client accounts and close deals in and from Switzerland. Foreign PE funds can also establish a branch in Switzerland. Both activities (i.e., the establishment of a representative office or a branch) require prior authorization by FINMA. This does not apply to foreign fund management companies, however, which may establish neither a branch nor a representative office in Switzerland. This regime for branches and representation offices of foreign financial institutions closely mirrors the current regime for foreign banks and securities dealers. The new regime will also apply to foreign portfolio managers and trustees as well as managers of collective assets that were unregulated until now. Foreign groups with a local presence in Switzerland may therefore need to reconsider their business model if they effectively carry out activities in Switzerland (including only marketing activities) as they would trigger licensing requirements.

In addition, PE funds need to notify FINMA (i) before they establish or close a subsidiary, branch or representative office abroad or (ii) before they purchase or dispose of a qualified participation in a foreign company. This notification will need to include a business plan and further information on the foreign operations, its directors and senior management, its auditors as well as its regulators and supervisors abroad.

Rules of conduct

PE funds will be required to adhere to a series of rules of conduct provided by FinSA, which must be complied with when providing financial services. These are duties of disclosure, duties to perform suitability and appropriateness tests, duties of documentation and accountability, and duties of due diligence and transparency.
Prospectus requirements

FinSA will also bring changes regarding the prospectus requirement in connection with the offering of equity and debt securities in primary and secondary markets. If financial instruments are offered to retail clients, a key information document must also be produced that should enable clients to make informed investment decisions and genuinely compare various financial instruments in a simple and understandable way. Subject to certain exemptions, the FinSA stipulates the necessity of a prior approval for offering prospectuses. Such approval shall be given by a new regulatory reviewing body vested with considerable administrative powers. Accordingly, such a new body needs to be licensed by FINMA and shall determine whether the prospectus is complete, coherent and understandable. PE funds that are subject to the revised CISA may be exempted from the prospectus requirement if they offer the product exclusively to qualified investors.

Swiss venture capital investment at a record level - CHF 1.2 billion for start-ups

For the first time, funds, large companies and private individuals have invested more than a billion francs in technology-driven start-up companies, Swiss Venture Capital Report 2109, published by the online news portal startupicker.ch in collaboration with the investor association SECA, shows that in 2018 Swiss start-ups received almost CHF 1.24 billion in venture capital across 230 financing rounds.

An increasing number of start-ups are the source of new technologies and business models. Dynamism at the interface of entrepreneurship and science is an important indicator of the long-term growth prospects of a country. For years, Switzerland has lagged behind comparable countries, such as Israel and Sweden, but it is now catching up fast. In 2018, venture capital investment increased by CHF 299 million to more than CHF 1.23 billion, an increase of 32% on 2017.

ICT investment doubles

The strongest growth, at more than 120%, was in investment in companies working on solutions to the challenges of digital transformation of business and society. Last year, 131 Swiss ICT start-ups conducted financing rounds and collected CHF 685 million from domestic and foreign lenders. For the first time, more money was invested in ICT companies than in start-ups in the life sciences sectors – biotech (CHF 253 million), medtech (CHF 123 million) and digital health (CHF 45 million).

Zurich in Top 10 in Europe

A glance at the cantonal distribution of investment shows that Vaud has lost its leading position. The new leader is canton Zurich, with 99 start-ups from various sectors raising CHF 515 million in venture capital. Thus, the agglomeration of Zurich was one of the 10 most dynamic locations in Europe in 2018.

Google, Alibaba and Porsche investing

Swiss start-ups have struggled for years to raise funds for expansion financing, but a comparison with other European countries shows that it has drawn closer in this area. About 60% of total investment – CHF 688 million – was accounted for by just 20 start-ups. Many of these, including AVA, Nexthink and Climeworks, are on the threshold of international market leadership, which makes them very attractive to the investment arms of well-known companies, such as Google, Alibaba, Porsche, Hyundai, Sony and Airbus.

Four IPOs and a huge deal

Although sentiment on the capital markets deteriorated in the second half of the year, earlier the IPO window was open and four Swiss technology companies seized the opportunity: Sensirion, Medartis, Polyphor and ASmallWorld. In addition, about 20 start-up teams sold their business to a major corporation: the most spectacular deal was the sale of Geneva biotech company Prexton Therapeutics, with a total transaction volume of just under CHF 1 billion.
More than a dozen new funds
Thanks to such exits, the venture capital sector has achieved returns in recent years that have out-performed other asset classes. And in 2018, it responded to the fast-growing investor interest with the establishment of more than 12 new funds.

The national economy is healthier thanks to private equity

Maurice Pedergnana, General Secretary of the Swiss Private Equity & Corporate Finance Association shares his insights into how Private Equity benefits the Swiss economy, can kick-start a company’s development and the vital expertise and perspectives it brings to businesses across sectors.

How have you noticed the Swiss private equity (PE) market developing in recent years?

Maurice Pedergnana (MP): In Switzerland, the PE asset class – just like other private market investments such as private debt, private real estate and private infrastructure – was neither very well known nor appreciated until 2007. Until then, it was of only marginal importance in the portfolios of private investors or institutional investors such as pension funds and family offices. Two typically Swiss characteristics contributed to this. First, performance is not viewed as something to shout about, even when it is good. And second, there is a general reticence in transaction-related communications, where only minimal information is revealed. This is in contrast to the more outspoken style of Anglo-Saxon communications that go on the offensive and are more effective at representing achievements. Presentations of profits, multiples, and buy-and-build platform strategies are more transparent in the English-speaking business context than the German-speaking one. In recent years, however, investors in Switzerland have also recognized the advantages of PE and are investing repeatedly in PE funds, which underscores trust in this asset class. PE is growing and more and more transactions involve private equity funds.

To what extent do the practices of PE managers differ from those of other investors?

MP: PE investor assesses a company’s business model from a much more entrepreneurial and long-term perspective, whereas a stock trader can sell an investment at a profit after a day of trading. A PE investor must bear in mind long-term considerations from the start, such as how a subsequent buyer of the assets can benefit. This inevitably leads to a longterm, sustainable approach. Accordingly, PE firms conduct very thorough and careful analyses and due diligence checks, and invest prudently.

Which Swiss PE success stories stand out in your memory?

MP: One case was the help that came from PE after the grounding of Swissair. Certain divisions of the SAir Group were still intact and in some cases very successful, including Swissport. They passed into the hands of PE firms. In the case of Swissport, the company became one of the world’s leading airport ground handling services providers, significantly increasing its financial metrics and corporate valuation. This is a good illustration of how PE can fuel a healing process; even when a holding company goes bankrupt, there are always some divisions that are healthy and can be kept operational. Another case is the spin-off of Burckhardt Compression from the Sulzer Group, when a member of Sulzer’s executive board decided to take over the business unit together with Zurmont Finanz AG. Burckhardt Compression had a very successful IPO a few years later – a great success story that illustrates PE-led entrepreneurship.

Such examples helped major firms to recognize the advantages of PE as a financier and investor, instilling further trust.
So PE can jump-start the next phase in a company’s development?

MP: Right. When PE investors buy a company, their investment is strategic and not solely financial. They look at a company with a fresh pair of eyes; they make specific management suggestions, improve processes and open up new markets. This was the case with vacuum valve manufacturer VAT Group in eastern Switzerland, a previously family-owned company that was taken over by the management, Capvis and Partners Group in 2013. VAT Group later had a very successful listing on the stock exchange. While PE investors are certainly more thoughtful, they are more impatient when it comes to resolving problems and optimizing processes. Both aspects are good for the company and the economy overall. The national economy is healthier thanks to PE.

Management and governance are also certainly different for a company that has PE investors.

MP: Absolutely. PE-owned companies implement strategies more efficiently and have swifter decision-making structures in place, alongside clear, target-focused milestones. Every strategic decision must result in a positive impact for the company. PE ownership tends to be much more closely aligned with the strategy process and its implementation. There are examples of entrepreneurial leaders who have been successful without the participation of PE investors, of course. However, the vast majority of SMEs benefit enormously from PE investors’ knowledge and influence. In general, experience shows that companies that have gone through a PE phase take forward the valuable governance elements and insights following an exit, which strengthens them for the following phases.

We know that institutional investors such as pension funds apply certain limits to alternative asset classes. Has this changed in recent years, and are these rules now looser?

MP: Alternative asset classes are not permitted to account for more than 15 percent of institutional investors’ portfolios. However, the universe of alternative asset classes has grown considerably in recent years. Most pension funds do not use all this 15 percent for alternative investments, which include PE, so there is still room for improvement. Pension funds could invest more in PE. Certainly some large pension funds invest in PE and take advantage of the extension option to allocate up to 25 percent of their portfolios to alternative investments.

That makes sense when viewed from a risk-based asset allocation standpoint, since the differentiation between PE and public equity is in some ways arbitrary. The trading volumes of some listed securities are so low that it may take months to sell a stock package of CHF 100 million, making these stocks similarly illiquid to those of a privately held company. Another example: two companies can operate in exactly the same market; one is listed and the other held by PE investors. Is the latter truly riskier?

I doubt it. The issue therefore arises as to whether this black-and-white view of institutional investment in the guidelines is obsolete.
PE investors currently have a large amount of ‘dry powder’, i.e. available investment capital, and banks offer very good debt financing conditions, allowing PE investors to bid very competitively with strategic investors. Are we on the verge of major overheating like in 2007?

MP: Relatively speaking, the dry powder has remained more or less stable in recent years. However, the total level of investment into the private market has increased. PE houses are currently raising funds at record highs, so the danger could arise of somewhat less care being taken over investments. Yet the hurdle rate of about eight percent functions as an implicit regulatory mechanism by ensuring that a potential investment by a PE firm is scrutinized very closely for its strategic core. The central challenge remains that the expected return is kept well above this eight percent level. Accordingly, PEs are either unwilling or unable to afford to pay excessively high prices. This ensures that the PE market will stay healthy.

Which other notable developments have you observed in recent years?

MP: One thing we have seen in the market is transfers of investments from one PE house to another as part of M&A transactions – secondary and even tertiary buy-outs. This can make sense if, for example, a company will benefit from the expertise of a new owner as part of geographical expansion or to tap into new markets. This is one of the qualities of a PE investor – to know not only their strengths, but also their limits and to recognize when the development of a company could be even better with a new partner.

How will PE develop and where do you see the journey taking us?

MP: In the near future, PE managers will probably have even more capital at their disposal to invest in companies. Capital will be provided not only by institutional investors in developed countries but I expect pension funds, state and sovereign wealth funds of developing countries to increasingly become keen on investing in PE funds. There will also be considerable shifts in the corporate world which will attract PE investors. Such shifts include conglomerates selling non-core divisions and right-sizing their businesses, either because they are indebted and need to raise capital, or because of shareholder pressure. In such cases, PE houses are often predestined buyers, especially in the case of consolidated markets, since strategic investors might face anti-trust issues. Moreover, the current downturn in stock markets enables PE houses to buy out listed companies, taking them private to optimize them and either sell them or conduct an IPO later on. Consequently, the role of PE houses in the economy will further gain importance, PE houses will participate in even more M&A transactions, further shaping the corporate landscape.

“We are building a powerful machine”

He is the most influential networker on the Swiss innovation and venture capital scene. Zurich lawyer Christian Wenger on new funding projects, his own investments and the tasks of politics.

Business magazine BILANZ named you in its list of ‘Digital Shapers’ as a ‘jack-of-all-trades’. How did that happen?

Christian Wenger (CW): Such a description doesn’t bother me. Frankly, I am scared myself when I read in BILANZ how much I do. But seriously, I’ve been here a long time and done a lot in recent years, and initiated and supported many innovation projects.

So the impression that you rather shun the limelight is deceptive?

CW: Basically, I prefer to act behind the scenes. I’m interested in the content. I am a transaction person, a dealmaker.

A word that through Donald Trump has come somewhat into disrepute...

CW: But it gets to the heart of the matter. Someone has to press the right buttons at the right time. Just as I did with the innovation initiative digitalswitzerland...

….where you were president until a few weeks ago.

CW: I made myself available as the founding president in 2015. I helped to bring together managers, politicians, officials and academics, and persuade them that digital transformation was a task that must be shared.

What is the central challenge of the coming years and decades for you?

CW: We live in an age of exponential technology. It takes less and less time for new applications to arrive at the end consumer. Some people believe that the dynamics of software development and nanotechnology will sooner or later lead to an artificial intelligence equal to human beings.

In the professional world, one speaks of technological singularity. I realise that such predictions are tricky, but the fact is that we live in a disruptive time. We must ensure that Switzerland is one of the winners of this development. In short, a digital Switzerland is about a prosperous life in an exponential world.

You have been on the venture capital and innovation scene for more than 20 years now. What has happened during this time?

CW: I remember how in 1998 we on the board of the Swiss Private Equity and Corporate Finance Association (SECA) set up a roadmap for our industry, and looked ahead to 2028. I have to say that we are fully on track: our country now has a working innovation and start-up ecosystem with well-connected accelerators and incubators. We have managed to get everyone talking to each other – the universities with the corporates, the corporates with the start-ups and the start-ups with the universities.

Twenty years ago, there was just a technopark in Zurich. That was it. Today, innovation promotion is high on the political priority list. Every secondary school student knows the word start-up; every university has a science and technology transfer office. The industry conducts corporate venturing and the Swiss Innovation Park (Switzerland Innovation) is developing a platform that will create additional synergies. We are building a powerful machine.
You are on the board of the Swiss Entrepreneurs Foundation (SwissEF) – what role will it play in this scenario?

CW: We have a gap in growth financing in Switzerland. Although Swiss start-ups pull financing rounds of between CHF 10 million and CHF 20 million, they are seldom made with Swiss lenders. This is a shortcoming that has been bothering me for years and I am extremely pleased that things have picked up speed now. SwissEF is currently building up a fund with a volume of CHF 500 million and approval from FINMA is expected soon. We have also set up a support organisation for fast growing start-ups. And, finally, we want to improve the legal framework.

In your opinion, what are the most important political unresolved issues?

CW: We need quotas for highly qualified people from non-EU countries and an improvement in the fiscal environment. The current taxation of business angels and venture capital fund managers, and also of employees who benefit from option programmes, is not useful.

What could be done better?

CW: We need something in the sense of a flat tax; a tax break of 5% to 10% for all start-up investors. That would not only mobilise domestic money, but also attract a lot of capital from abroad. Politics must become more courageous and innovative in this field. Because new jobs in Switzerland will be created mainly by start-ups.

Your proposal does not fit into the Swiss tax system...

CW: I hear this argument again and again. But the taxation of capital gains as income, which we have now, just does not fit. It inhibits the financing of start-ups, and thus Switzerland as an innovation location.

SwissEF’s sponsors include Credit Suisse, UBS, Swisscom and insurance group Mobiliar. However, pension funds, which previously have been very cautious in terms of venture capital, should also participate in the fund. How will you tackle that?

CW: This brings us to another political issue. The pension fund managers justify their caution by citing the Ordinance on Occupational Retirement, Survivors’ and Disability Pension Plans (BVV 2). That is why we believe that this regulation should be amended. You have to realise that the pension funds currently manage about CHF 750 billion. A large part of this is invested in real estate and bonds, and is therefore not available for investment in the future.

If 1% of this – CHF 7.5 billion – were to go into start-up financing, we would be able to take a big step forward. We could multiply the annual investment in one fell swoop. A comparable country such as Israel invests about EUR 4 billion annually. We Swiss could do a lot with a billion francs.
Henri B. Meier’s Swiss Future Fund also wants to collect money from the pension funds and also wants to engage in growth financing. What are the differences between the two funds?

CW: The Swiss Future Fund pursues a top-down approach: its investments aim to promote certain fields of technology that it considers to be important for the future of Switzerland. SwissEF, on the other hand, has no intention of steering; it invests in the existing. We complement each other. Thus, I hope of course that the Future Fund is realised soon.

As a board member of SwissEF, you have been able to attract the former economics minister Johann Schneider Ammann. How important was that?

CW: His patronage is an important political signal to all those involved. I very much regret his resignation. Although Johann Schneider Ammann seldom had a good press, I know personally that as a federal councillor and former entrepreneur, he has done a great deal in the past for Switzerland as an innovation and workplace location.

In addition to your activities as a lawyer, networker and driver, you are also active as a start-up investor. Where does your focus lie?

CW: I am generally interested in technology that makes things easier and faster. My involvement has been broad: I was with chip manufacturer u-blox, which is listed on the Swiss Stock Exchange today, and I was involved with medtech device company Xeltis and Kooaba, an ETH spin-off that was later acquired by semiconductor group Qualcomm.

How important is money to you personally?

CW: It helps me to get things moving. Our law firm [Wenger & Vieli] is one of Switzerland’s leading business and tax law consultants with 60 lawyers. This gave us the means to make a contribution to SwissEF’s foundation capital. In the group of donors, we are the only SME in addition to four companies and the Gebert Rüf Stiftung.

Your current mission is the ‘Autonomous Valley’ project. What does the term mean?

CW: At digitalswitzerland, we work with verticals. We network corporates, start-ups and universities along specific value chains. One of these verticals is devoted to autonomous mobility. We work on questions around artificial intelligence and robotics. Now we are looking for a region that will provide a testing ground for new applications; we’re thinking of a valley in the Jura or the Alps.

Has the search been successful?

CW: Not yet. The call for proposals will be announced soon. I am convinced we will get a large response, since the project is a great economic opportunity for a structurally weak area.

Looking abroad - In search of the unicorns

Even though Switzerland is not yet a unicorn factory, the largest rounds of financing are certainly impressive in comparison with Europe.

The volume of the 20 largest financing rounds forms a substantial part of the total financing activities of a venture capital market, with the proportion of total volume estimated at between 40% and 70%. Historically, this statistic takes into account the five largest European venture capital markets, including Israel and Switzerland. In 2018, by far the most capital was raised by start-ups in the UK and Germany, with USD 2.6 billion and USD 2.3 billion respectively. This was followed by France and Israel, each with more than CHF 1 billion, while financing volumes in Switzerland, Sweden and the Netherlands were between USD 500 million and USD 700 million.

In five out of seven countries, the ICT sector is the largest in terms of percentage of investment capital. The proportion varies from slightly over 40% in Switzerland to more than 70% in France. The fintech sector is the most significant in the UK and the Netherlands, with the start-up hub of London the front-runner here. Life sciences account for no more than 36% (Sweden), with Switzerland just behind at 35%. In terms of sector diversity, Sweden, Switzerland and the UK are the most uniformly positioned.

The top 20 contains some very similar business models – such as e-commerce platforms and smartphone banks. Overall, Switzerland can be proud: in terms of creation of technological disruption – deeptech – it appears to be well prepared in comparison with European competitors. However, the number of high-tech start-ups from abroad in the fields of blockchain, artificial intelligence and virtual reality is also rapidly increasing.

1'700 participants attended the Startup DAYs (SUD) in 2018, which for the second time, was held during 2 full days. After several years at the Stade de Suisse, the event moved on its second day to the KURSAAL in Bern, a yet bigger conference center with the capacity to accommodate the growth planned by the organization in the years to come.

In the morning of the first day, 10 Masterclasses were offered addressing relevant topics for Startups covering areas such as Termsheets, Winning in Sales, IP or Exit strategies. In the afternoon, 4 Panels were held the main stage where Investors, Lawyers, Startup Champions and the Female Founders were asked questions by the moderator to give the audience later an opportunity to ask the questions they always wanted to ask.

More than 180 startup companies from 36 countries presented their cases to the audience and scrutiny of an expert investor jury. The Pitching Battle qualification for the 5 Tech Tracks was held in 3 stages throughout the event.

In the evening 200 Investors, Corporates, Supporters and the 30 best Startups of the Pitching Battle joined the traditional Investor DINNER. On this special occasion the founding team of Startup INVEST was on stage to celebrate its 15th anniversary of the organization. The ETH Entrepreneur Club INCUBE Celebration was the highlight of the evening.

The second day started at the KURSAAL with more than 50 Investors and support organizations pitching in one minute their offers and updates on Stage. Then 30 qualifying companies pitched at the semifinals on 2 Stages where only investors could vote.

After lunch the Council of the Swiss Confederation, Johann Schneider-Ammann, received a warm welcome by all participants and was interviewed by our Chairman, Christian Wenger.

The 1:1 meetings were started with 100 tables and more than 750 meetings were formally held. Not counting all the networking happening throughout the day.
The event was closed with the Final of the Pitching Battle, were the winner Swiss Vault won CHF 50’000.- in cash and the four runner-ups all received valuable coaching hours from our Sponsors.

At the event we also distributed the X Edition of the Startup GUIDE, with 38 cover stories and 15 Startup profiles (www.startupguide.online).

To get a better feeling and understanding for the Startup DAYs just watch our After Event Movie (www.startupdays.ch).

In October 2018 we were running a pitching competition at the Digital DAY in HB Zurich. In June 2018 and November 2018 more than 200 participants attended the IPO DAYs in Lausanne and then in Zurich. Promising Swiss High Tech Companies pitched to the Investment Bankers and Advisors. Thereafter the Investment Bankers and Advisors pitched to all participants before the 1:1 meetings started. The event partners Euronext and BakerMcKenzie held a workshop regarding IPOs.

After his first year at Startup INVEST, Daniel Bermejo was promoted Co-Managing Director as of beginning 2019. We are happy to have him on board, with all his energy, creativity but also his strong execution power.

To close, as every year, we would like to thank all our members, partners and sponsors for their support and look forward to work even more intensively with digitalswitzerland in 2019.

Die Private Markets Zielallokation der institutionellen Investoren in der Schweiz soll 3% bis 7% betragen

Das Knowhow dazu ist in der Schweiz vorhanden, weil einige der weltweit führenden Anbieter hier ihren Hauptsitz haben. Die SECA veranstaltet Seminare und bietet Informationsmaterial, um die Anlageklasse institutionellen Investoren näher zu bringen.

Um die Vorteile der Anlageklassen nutzen zu können, sollte die Private Markets Zielallokation von langfristig orientierten institutionellen Investoren nach unserer Einschätzung 3% bis 7% betragen.

Financial Audit & Report
To the general meeting of
SECA – Swiss Private Equity & Corporate Finance Association

Cham, February 26, 2019

Report of the statutory Auditors to the general meeting of SECA – Swiss Private Equity & Corporate Finance Association, 6304 Zug

As statutory auditors, we have carried out a review of the financial statements of SECA – Swiss Private Equity & Corporate Finance Association for the financial year ended on December 31, 2018. Responsible for the financial statements is the board of the association, whereas our task is to submit a report on the financial statements based on our review.

Our review took place in accordance with the Swiss Audit Standard 910. This means that a review is to be planned and executed in such a manner that material misstatements in the financial statements are identified, even though not with the same assurance as in the case of an audit. A review consists mainly of interviewing members of staff and analytical aucit work in relation to the data forming the basis for the financial statements. We have conducted a review, not an audit, and are therefore not submitting an audit opinion.

In the course of our review, we did not identify any circumstances which would lead us to the conclusion that the financial statements do not correspond to the law and the articles of association.

Short Company Profile

At Unigestion we focus on an area of the private equity market that is difficult or inefficient for investors to access themselves – small and mid-market global private equity. Since there are barriers to access, we believe this part of the market offers the greatest potential for superior returns, yet many investors need guidance before being able to participate fully in this market. We have provided such guidance for more than 20 years. With the acquisition of Akina in 2017, Unigestion created a global small and mid-market specialist with a team of 50 specialists and USD 7 billion assets under management. It has private equity operations in Geneva, Zurich, London, Luxembourg, Jersey City and Singapore. The Unigestion Private Equity team was awarded “Private Equity Manager of the Year” by European Pensions Awards 2017 as well as the Gold Award (2011, 2016) and the Silver Award (2012 – 2017) for “Best LP, Regional Strategy” by Private Equity Exchange & Awards. Unigestion is a signatory to the Principles for Responsible Investment (PRI). www.unigestion.com/private-equity.

Articles of Association & Model Documentations
The Articles of Association of SECA and SECA Model Documentations can be found on the SECA website: www.seca.ch/templates.aspx

SECA Model Documentation: Swiss Limited Partnership
SECA promoted and accompanied the introduction of the limited partnership in Swiss legislation very actively from the start. In a joint effort with the Swiss Funds & Asset Management Association SFAMA, SECA (under the lead of Hannes Glaus) has drawn up a model prospectus and a company agreement for the limited partnership for collective investments which was acknowledged and accepted by FINMA as the basis for applications of authorizations. The documentation helps structuring the limited partnership and aims at smoothening the application procedure with FINMA.

SECA Model Documentation: Venture Capital
Together with outside experts, SECA has drawn up a model documentation for smaller venture capital transactions in the range of CHF 5 – 20 Mio. The documentation comprising a term sheet, an investment agreement, a shareholders agreement, a cap-table, articles of association and board regulations can be downloaded below for free.

The documentation makes venture investments in Switzerland more efficient and has increasingly become a standard for venture investments in Switzerland. The Legal & Tax Chapter encourages everyone to let it know of any shortcomings in order to constantly improve the documentation.

SECA would like to thank its Legal & Tax Chapter for its initiative and the following participants for their contributions and the many hours which went into this documentation.

- Ioan Eglin, Bratschi AG
- Martin Frey, Baker & McKenzie
- Dieter Gerlcke, Homburger AG
- Hannes Glaus, Bratschi AG
- Beat Kühni, Lenz & Staehelin
- Beat Speck, Wenger & Vieli AG
- Michael Trippel, Bär & Karrer AG
- Oliver Träbold, Schellenberg Wittmer
- Ulysses von Salis, Niederer Kraft & Frey
- Christian Wenger, Wenger & Vieli AG

The Legal & Tax Chapter has published a third update in 2018 for SECA's VC Model Documentation to reflect regulatory changes.

In addition, the Legal & Tax Chapter of SECA has launched a VC Model Documentation "light" that is fully compatible with the regular VC Model Documentation for smaller (pre institutional investor) financing rounds.
